

TAFT DEFENDS HIS POLICY OF THE WOOL, COTTON AND FREE LIST TARIFF BILLS

Killed the Measures Because It Was His "Bounden Duty" Under Party Pledges, He Declares in First Statement on His Policy.

CHIEF POINTS IN PRESIDENT TAFT'S DEFENSE.

Had to veto the wool, cotton and free list tariff bills. It was his bounden duty under pledges made to his party. The bills did not represent a proper measure of protection of the industries affected and were, therefore, not good Republican legislation.

Many framing of important tariff bills at an extra session of Congress called for another purpose was unnecessary.

The Tariff Board had been instructed to report to the President and Congress, especially on wool, in time for the regular session next December.

The Democrats introduced and the House passed the three tariff bills for political purposes.

We have reached a point when every one ought to realize that the tariff ought not to be changed and business disturbed except upon information which will allow us to pass bills that will disturb it the least.

To cut the tariff rates now with "blacksmith's tools" is to invite in the next two or three years a revolution of feeling and then a recurrence to higher rates and the old system of higher tariffs.

Proposes to stop such a movement and to secure a reduction in accordance with the Republican platform.

If that policy is not approved by the people "then those of us" who are now in office must give way to those who will carry out a different policy.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Sept. 21.—Declaring that it was his "bounden duty" and that he had to veto the Democratic Wool, Free List and Cotton bills, President Taft to-day, for the first time, made a defense of his tariff policy. Speaking here to a great throng, in which were Democrats as well as insurgents and standpat Republicans, the President emphatically held that under his pledges to the Republican party he could not have done anything else. He attacked the Democrats, saying their tariff revision policy was a game of politics, and rapped the Republican insurgents on the same score. Mr. Taft made it plain that even if defeat stared him in the face he would not alter his tariff policy.

The President rested his entire case on the foundation that his administration is committed to the revision of the tariff scientifically through the tariff board. He criticized the methods of Congress in framing the bills revising the Wool bill, making additions to the free list and revising the cotton schedule. To prove that the Republican party is committed to the tariff board policy the President reviewed the history of the movement for a tariff board. He quoted clauses endorsing the policy from the Republican State Convention of Ohio, New York, Wisconsin, Iowa and Kansas, the very States whose insurgent representatives voted for the tariff bills.

The measure, the President declared, did not represent a proper measure of protection of the industries affected, and was therefore not good Republican legislation.

"If I had allowed the Wool bill to become a law," he said, "the progress made toward a better method of revising the tariff would have been entirely lost and the policy thrown to the winds."

The President declared also that the hasty framing of important tariff bills at an extra session of Congress called for another purpose was unnecessary, as the Tariff Board had been instructed to report on wool, in time for the action at the regular session this winter.

OUTLINES TARIFF POLICY HE WILL PURSUE.

The President definitely outlined his tariff policy, and declared that he would pursue that policy at all hazards.

"I insist," he said, "that we have now reached a point when every one ought to realize that the tariff ought not to be changed and business disturbed except upon information which will allow us to pass bills that will disturb it the least. The natural condition of the tariff under such conditions, with American ingenuity, is due to reduce the cost of production and that in itself will secure, if we adhere to that policy, reduction of tariff rates from time to time."

GIRL WHEELS DEAD BABY AROUND BLOCK AN HOUR.

Mother Faints When Little Caretaker Stops and Tells Her Child Is Sleeping.

Mary Montero, nine years old, of No. 1077 Washington avenue, the Bronx, wheeled a baby in front of her home for more than an hour last night before it was known that the baby was dead.

Mary had pleaded with Mrs. Tripaldi, mother of the child, to let her wheel the baby up and down the block in the carriage. The mother consented, but cautioned her not to go off the block.

Mary passed back and forth in front of the house many times and reported to the mother the child was sleeping. She stopped once in front of the mother to lift the baby up in a sitting position and screamed. Then she called to the mother, who on picking the infant up realized that the baby was dead and fell in a faint.

Dr. Benjamin of Lebanon Hospital responded to the call and revived the mother. He examined the baby and said it had been dead for over an hour.

SUFFRAGETTE TUG OF WAR.

Women to Be Fitted Against Men Opposed to Movement and No Odds Asked.

A tug of war between militant suffragettes and mere men is scheduled to take place on Wednesday evening, Oct. 4, at Lyceum Hall, Third avenue and Thirty-fourth street, in connection with a bazaar and fall festival which is to be conducted under the auspices of the Woman's Suffrage Association of the Fourteenth Assembly District.

"We're going to pick out men who are opposed to votes for women for one side," said a member of the committee to-day, "and we're going to put our most formidable women on the other. We're not going to ask any odds for the women, either. It's going to be an even battle."

The association will resume its weekly meetings to-night at No. 140 East Thirty-fourth street, when addresses will be delivered by John Vaughan, Mrs. Harriet Johnson Wood and Mrs. Mary Hastings.

was the question the old champion put next. "There's only about thirty Senators ever get their names in the papers as being behind a bill for the good of the people, and you never hear of more than thirty-five Congressmen."

Up to this time John's attitude on all subjects had been decidedly pessimistic, but all was changed with the arrival of a third person. Not Mr. John this time, either, but a little freckled lad of eight years, who answered to the name of "Bill." The gray fighter said as soon as the little fellow came into the house to get the bountiful lunch that Mrs. John had prepared for him—because she was preparing this was the only reason that John and the reporter ever escaped to the freedom of "the place"—that they had adopted the lad a few months ago and he was to be their son.

As the reporter was leaving John L. growled out an epigram of some class. Said he:

"Why don't they cut out these campaign promises and stick a man for what he has done? I didn't get my chance by going to some manager and telling him that I was the best fighter in the world. I had to go out and kick a bunch of dubs before I got a chance. I had to show something. Why don't they cut out these campaign promises and stick a man for what he has done?"

"I retired one evening and after sleeping a couple of hours was awakened by a burning sensation all over the upper part of my body. It was just simply terrible and made it impossible for me to sleep the rest of that night, so I had to sit up all night, every couple of minutes. As the hours went by it grew worse and worse. When daylight arrived I saw that my body was covered with large red marks about an inch or two apart. My face was also affected. I stayed home that day and went to see a doctor. He told me that I had some serious something poisonous, and I had the hives. He prescribed a medicine and also gave me some ointment. As the days went by I steadily grew worse, the marks changing from one part of my body to another. The medicine and ointment were of no use, and I felt greatly disappointed until one evening by chance looking over the papers I saw the Cuticura Remedies advertised. I immediately procured some Cuticura Ointment and applied it to my body. I could hardly believe it, but it seemed to ease my skin right away. I kept on using the Cuticura Ointment for a week and can say that I certainly was the finest preparation I had ever used. It completely cured me, and I have not been troubled since. (Signed) William Waterman, 120 E. 100th St., New York City, Dec. 8, 1910.

Although Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a liberal sample of each, with 32-page booklet on the skin and hair, will be sent, post-free, on application to Cuticura, P. O. Box 100, Boston.

WHERE ARE THE STATESMEN WHEN WORK'S DOING?

"Gov. Foster? Well, the only thing I can say is, it's a funny thing to call him a Democratic Governor. He got kicked out of the Republican party. He is Governor because he wants the honor of being Governor, not because he is looking out for the welfare of the State, or because he needs the money. He's got all the money he wants, and he probably thinks the State has all the welfare it needs."

"What's the matter with the Senate and Congress, and all the rest of them?"
